YARKER.

School Thursday evening last the school house caught fire from some unknown cause and there was a rush of the inhabitants of the village to help put out the blaze. Men, women and children carried pails of water from their homes as soon as the alarm was given, and a call was sent to Odessa. Mr. Oswald responded with the fire extinguisher, and after much hard work the building was saved. The damage is not serious, but considerable repairs will have to be made before school starts again.

A very unfortunate incident connected with the fire was the prostration of Almon Brown. He was stricken with heart failure and in the act of running to the fire. Doctors Oldham and Stratton were summoned and it was at first thought there was little prospect of his recovery.

Many of our young men are leaving for points in the United States as a result of the receipt of letters telling of the demands for labor and the high wages paid. On Tuesday Chit Richardson went to Detroit, and William Wilson to Rochester.

MAJORITY ANTI-TORY

THIS APPEARS AS CONFESSION OF W. F. NICKLE.

In his nomination speech at Kingston, W. F. Nickle, K.C., attempted to justify the Conservatives' blockade of the business of the legislature by claiming that the measure they were opposing would have wiped out their party. Mr. Nickle's reference must have been to the single transferable vote. By no stretch of the imagination could he have meant that a redistribution of the ridings that would have increased the urban representation in the House would have destroyed the Conservative party. Nor could the trial of the proportional system of voting in one or two grouped ridings have had such tragic results.

The meaning of the Conservative member for Kingston, therefore, must have been that the transferable voting system's provision that every member must be the choice of a majority of the voters, either on first, second or third preferences, would have brought about the rejection of Conservative candidates.

Mr. Nickle's confession is an extraordinary one. He admits that a majority of the electorate are opposed to the Conservative party. He discounts all the frothy talk about a Conservative wave sweeping the province. He recognizes that the Ferguson following's only chance of escaping annihilation is the division of the anti-Conservative second, or third preferences.

Independent observers have appreciated that the Ferguson group had no chance of success if the anti-Conservative electors were permitted to pool their votes by the counting of second preferences in three-member ridings. But it was hardly expected that one of Mr. Ferguson's chief lieutenants would publicly intimate that the Conservatives' chance of success in the election next month depended entirely on the frustration of the will of the people and the heading off of what might be called the clear-majority-voting-system.—Toronto Star.

ADDINGTON LIBERAL CONVENTION

MAJOR (REV.) TOLMIE ADDRESSES THE CONVENTION

At Tamworth, on Wednesday, the Liberals of the Riding of Addington met in convention at Tamworth and selected Mr. W. H. J. Haines, of Tamworth, to contest the Riding in the Liberal interest in the present Provincial election. Several names were placed in nomination but all withdrew in favor of Mr. Haines, who, in a short speech accepted the nomination and will work from now until the close of the campaign to retrieve the Riding for the Liberals. The meeting enthusiastically promised to Mr. Haines the full support of all the Liberals in the Riding in his endeavor to win the election.

Several local speakers addressed the meeting, all seeming confident of victory, based on the fact that there has been no Provincial contest in the riding for some years, Mr. Haines may win it.

Major Tolmie, M.P.P. for Windsor, was the principal speaker of the meeting and those present would have liked to have heard from him a much longer address than the time at his disposal between trains permitted him to make.

MR. TOLMIE.

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I can assure you I appreciate very much the kind way you have received and greeted me and address you at this Convention this morning and I am pleased to see so large a crowd although it is a busy time of the moment. I have been at a good many Conventions in my day and I have been at several many Conventions that have been smaller than this Convention is.

I haven't much time but I may say I believe in the policy of the Liberals here to put a man in the field. Now you ask me why. It is because I have anything against my friend Mr. Black for he is not, I think just as much of my friend Mr. Black as I do of the gentleman that just sat down. I have known him for years, he is a splendid man. I have not a word to say against him, but at the present time remember, I am conservative and we are here as Liberals. No, it is not that I have anything against Mr. Black but because I have something against Mr. Ferguson, and I do not think it would be a good thing for the Province of Ontario to work in the interest of Mr. Ferguson.

If you continue to let elections pass by without a man in the field, you in a manner abandon the faults which the Liberal party are fighting. Put in your man and back him with all your strength. What was the consequence four years ago? The Liberals had no men in the field at all. As far as I am able to judge the situation with the Liberals who have been brought out to the meetings and the large crowd on the 28th of June, the Liberals all over the country are standing together and are going on.

The Liberals were willing, following the last election, to give the Conservatives a fair opportunity to carry on, but in the present election the Liberals were out to win for themselves.

The platform of the O.T.A. we stand right here as Liberals and say that the Act was passed by the Province and should be submitted to the people and passed by them and only by the people of the Province can the Act be repealed. It is useless to talk to people themselves to say what they are going to do in that matter. I believe in Temperance, and if the Province of Ontario says we do not want the O.T.A., the Province has a perfect right to express its views and legislate. I do not know where the Conservative candidate in this riding stands, but I do know where the Conservative candidate in my riding stands. It is on a well platform and stands for doing away with the O.T.A. We don't doubt, we have heard of Mr. Ferguson's much heralded Temperance policy which seems to be swept in every direction and is somewhat dry in others. Do the people of Ontario wish to entrust the enforcement of the Act to a party who are split with a split? Let me say in conclusion that I was born a Liberal, trained in Liberalism and I mean to be a Liberal. My purpose is to try and make this Province just a little better, a little fairer for all men, women and children to dwell in the land. This land is going to be a great land after you and I have gone. It is going to advance. We are here to work for social and moral uplift. I dream of the day that is coming, when this Province will be a fair land where men may dwell in harmony, unity and peace."

FOR LENNOX AND ADDINGTON

DELIVERS A SPEECH ON THE BUDGET.

(From Hansard.)

Mr. Speaker, I am persuaded that my contribution to this verbal deluge will not, perhaps, be of very great value. Still, on account of the importance of the subject before the House I feel it incumbent upon me to express some of my opinions in connection with this budget.

I admit that the task of discharging the duties of a finance minister is a tremendous one, involving perhaps more labour and care and ability than many of us have a true conception of. Therefore I find mingled in my suggestions this evening feelings of sympathy and respect for our worthy Finance Minister (Mr. Fielding). Perhaps in my remarks to-night I may deviate somewhat from the general line of discussion that has been followed. I desire not to be specific, but I shall speak along lines of general principles.

Canada has a debt of approximately two billion dollars. If we consider this debt in comparison with her undeveloped abilities or her resourceful wealth we have ground for optimism; but if we consider this debt in comparison with her volume of business and her population this problem is a bit more serious. Yet I take it, Mr. Speaker, that every statesman, every representative should have a determination and express that determination that this debt can and must be paid. Indeed every citizen should feel that Canada is his country and that the defeat or success of Canada means his personal defeat or success, that the distinguishment of the country means his distinguishment. A national debt means a depreciation in the value of individual possession. Therefore, every one should feel that it is his imperative duty to endeavour to pay this debt of the country. In order to make this privilege proportionately possible governments have as far back as we can remember resorted to taxation.

In raising the revenue there are certain fundamental principles to be observed. Governments try if possible to bring down a balance budget, or to go one better and bring in a surplus, but when large war debts accrue and post-war conditions obtain I apprehend, Mr. Speaker, that to bring down taxation proposals that would produce a surplus in any one fiscal year might not be the wisest policy to follow. It might create demands that would discourage and lower the morale of the people and retard national progress. We, however, with governments and citizens, should try to decrease the deficit. In the report brought down by the Finance Minister for the fiscal year 1922-1923 we see that the revenue estimated on the then existing method of taxation amounted to something like $332,000,000 and that the expenditure was $460,000,000 odd. This convinced, or should have convinced, the people of Canada of the necessity of accepting the burden of additional taxation, but I am free to state that no honest gentleman here decided within his own mind that we would have a balanced budget, that there would not be an increase in the deficit. In fact, as the many people in my riding I estimated that there would be a deficit of perhaps twenty or thirty million dollars. Now we are facing a condition. The business of Canada will not permit an increase in taxation. Neither would it be wisdom to decrease our revenue from taxation. Then where is relief to come?

I wish by way of constructive suggestion to refer to two well-tried principles that are fundamental in this connection; First an increase in national business, and secondly economic retrenchment in financial expenditure. It is necessary for Canada to have more people. You cannot have a greater business unless you have more people. Our population is about nine million; the population of United States is about one hundred and twenty million. I would therefore suggest that the federal parliament and the provincial legislatures should co-operate in a vigorous policy of an effective kind to induce immigrants to come into our country. No matter what their vocation in life, so long as they are not undesirables, speaking in the broad sense of the word, let them come. We are not importing machines; we are importing men and women, men who are eager and willing to start at the bottom of the ladder. Men who start at the bottom of the ladder generally look up. It is the man who starts at the top generally looks down. If we get enough people who will appreciate the great privileges that this Dominion of Canada has for them, and will take hold of these privileges, that will be a great help in increasing our business. Along with that I would suggest that the government of Canada try in every possible way to develop our natural resources. Canada is rich in minerals, and I was pleased to hear the Finance Minister speak of the efforts put forth for the mining of copper. I hope that there will be efforts put forward for the mining of coal, for I believe that we have coal mines in Canada capable of supplying our people with all their fuel requirements. It is true that in its early development any mine or any works might not pay, but if we persist the time will come when the output will be profitable even that it will pay. The development of the natural resources and more people in this country mean more business.

Let me now take up my second thought, economic retrenchment. It is true that in the development of a country the spirit of miserliness must be forgotten. We must carry on necessary public works, but it does seem to me sometimes and to others who have spoken to me that parliaments that handle money by the millions of dollars seem to forget the value of the hundred dollars. Of course, we know that all departments try in a way, or at least they ought to, to curtail unnecessary expenditure, but I sometimes think that the members do not try very hard to do this. They come here with requests from the different provinces and from the people of their riding for all manner of new public works, post offices, dry docks and so forth. I think it is only right that members should consider the financial condition of the country and not encourage those who ask them to try and further such works. It would be a help to the men who have the responsibility of carrying on these works.

Let me mention a few things that, perhaps, may not be very popular. Aside from the expenditures on public works, economies might be effected in other directions which would save, I think, millions of dollars to the treasury. With all due respect to the late government, as well as to the present government, the administration of the country's affairs is far too expensive and has been for some years. I am well aware that my suggestions for retrenchment may be unacceptable. They certainly will not be very popular in the city of Ottawa. However, I want to make a few remarks as to the cost of government here and if I am wrong in any respect I am quite ready to be corrected. First of all there must be a retrenchment in expenditures in connection with the Civil Service. I voted for an investigation into the salaries, classification and numbers of the staff of the Civil Service. It seems to me that the investigation which is being conducted into these matters ought to result in a very substantial saving. Salaries are disproportionately high. They have been increased from time to time because it was the custom so to do. In that respect we have been following a practice which obtains in other countries, with the result that the stipends are in very many cases too high.

Then I would restrict in very great measure, the expenditure on superannuation and retiring allowances. Why should men who have been receiving large salaries for the greater part of their lives receive a retiring allowance when quitting the service, when hundreds of thousands of people who are following vocations that are essential from the standpoint of the national well-being and who are in every way good and commendable citizens get no such allowance when the time comes for them to quit work. This question has been impressed upon the public mind by the very large amounts granted to officials of the government railways on retirement. The electors are asking why, for example, a railway president who has been receiving a salary of from $35,000 to $50,000 should be retired on an allowance of $35,000 If the expenditures of the public departments are carefully studied it will be found that there are many directions in which retrenchment is possible thus, possibly causing a saving that could be devoted to the reduction of our national debt.

I want to speak now for a moment or two on the question of taxation. As fair minded citizens we cannot rebel against just and equitable taxation, but we can protest against extravagance and we, as a parliament, can show the lead to the rest of the country by practising economy ourselves. In my mind when budget proposals are brought down the effort should be to relieve the burden of taxation where it bears heaviest upon the great mass of what I might term unprivileged people, and to impose such taxation as is necessary in the interests of the revenue upon those best able to bear it. At the same time I do not believe in the doctrine of equality which we often hear preached: I think that is something which ought to be discouraged as undemocratic. On the other hand, men who are in responsible positions should do their utmost to discourage that spirit of selfishness and graft, too often present in the human character, and which in the past has resulted in oppression of the financially weak by the financially strong. I know, Mr. Speaker, that it is exceedingly difficult to arrange equitable methods of taxation. There are some methods that commend themselves to all of us; there are other methods that we do not approve of. It seems to me, for example, that there could be no fairer tax than the income tax. Nevertheless we find people who have never paid a cent of income tax in their lives raising the greatest outcry in regard to it. I also believe that a business tax is fair. If a man is conducting a good business he certainly can afford to pay a tax of some kind. Then there is a consumer's tax. If it is absolutely such as represented and can be made workable I cannot see that there is anything so particularly wrong about it, provided due regard be paid to the principle by which I have spoken. I had intended saying something about the sales tax because in calling upon different business men in my own riding a common complaint was made that it was unworkable. I understand, however, that the Minister of Finances having had various deputations wait upon him has made the necessary changes so that the main ground for criticism no longer does exist. There are some methods of taxation of which I certainly do not approve. The tax, whether direct or indirect in its nature, which builds up one industry at the expense of another is unfair. It is based on special privilege which is unjust and will result in bringing about an unbalanced economic condition.

In 1878 or 1879, Sir John A. McDonald introduced his National Policy, a policy to build up cities. I remember hearing a speech delivered by him in our county town, to the effect that if you build up your towns, your cities, you build up home markets, and thereby you build up your country. All this, however, had to be done at the expense of the rural districts. Nobody ever built up a city from above, nor from below. This, to my mind, has obtained too long in the interest of the cities' wealth and the cities' privileges, and it has resulted in the neglect of rural interests. People are exceptional reverse of this policy. Not only have I heard men who believe in the Liberal platform or in the Progressive platform, but I have talked during the last year to men who professed to be Conservatives, and they say emphatically that there must be a downward revision of this protective feature.

Leaving for a moment this campaign football, the tariff, let me say that there are other questions of momentous concern for men who are in responsible positions as ministers of the Crown or even as representatives of the people. There are forceful organizations which are national octopuses, and they are chaining the hands of governments and parliaments. In North America governments are strangled; they are helpless. The forceful feature, for instance, in the labor unions and I say this with all respect to labor—has become reactionary. There was a time when labor was not recognized as it should be. I know that because for several years when I was younger I worked as a mechanic; I have associated with such men and I know whereof I speak. But silently and subtly, this union has been working until the plumb line has been overthrown. The strikes are unprofitable from the fact that they throw men into idleness for a certain length of time during the season, and they keep up the high cost of living the whole season around. Vigorous efforts are made from time to time by commission work and in every other way, to see if there cannot be some conciliation between labourers and their employers. During the height of the coal strike in the United States, President Harding is reported as saying that if the United States government would take over the mines and they would see that the people were supplied with the necessary fuel. Immediately after that he received word that he had better go slowly and be considerable, or trouble would be stopped. This is a serious condition. It is a more important matter to occupy the minds of men in responsible positions than for them to play party politics.

There are other unions which are fixing, maintaining and controlling prices, and it is a problem to know how to manage them. Farmers organize, but the prices of lines of merchandise their price is fixed from above, and that price is maintained by controlling the output. Would it be practicable, if it were possible, for those engaged in agricultural pursuits to form unions, combines, and monopolies, and to fix the price of the foodstuffs of the world? Certainly that would not be right. But is the principle of protection or monopolies in any respect that we as Progressives stand against. I am sure that organizations of labour, if will be to the eternal honour of some government to at some time make this decision and, in spite of any influences whatever, act upon it.

Let me speak for a moment on agriculture. After hearing the Minister of Agriculture's Motherwell talk for two hours and a half, I do not know but that I might almost feel optimistic, I will, however, make this statement, that farmers have not come to parliament to have glass beads hanging about their necks, nor to receive bouquets for the farming interests and nothing else, and then to run home like children. Those who are engaged in agricultural pursuits are broad enough to know that there is a diversity of industries in Canada, and that every industry, no matter whether it be great or small, must have its status. Since I have been in Ottawa, I have arrived at some conclusions in connection with the duties of parliament. One is this—and I say this conscientiously and with due respect—that the man who has been brought up in the city has a very slim conception of what agriculture means. Another conclusion to which I have come is that partisan politics is costing this country too much, and people are beginning to find it out. The trouble with the agricultural industry to-day is, plainly speaking, that the prices of all the supplies that the man who is engaged in agricultural pursuits requires, are so governed by combines that he has nothing to say. If he cannot afford to buy those supplies, there is no use in saying so; the prices are fixed, maintained and controlled without a commensurate profit being given. On the other hand, if an agriculturist has anything to sell, there appears an army of respectable people, of course, whom you could not coax or persuade in any way to go out on a farm. They stand between the consumer and the product of the farmer. They have to be kept and this creates a spread. They cannot ask too much because the consumer cannot buy the article, so they have to go the other way and force the price down on the agriculturalist until it is almost impossible to coax or persuade young men to continue in agricultural pursuits. We hope that the very effective work of the different parliamentary committees, together with the Combines Act, will tend to relieve conditions. At any rate they will reveal those conditions, which will be realized by the public, and will create a sentiment which may perhaps have the effect of ameliorating matters.

As regards the budget, I must confess that I am very much disappointed. We were told some things last year that we thought justified us in supporting the minister's budget at that time. We realized that it was the government's first year in office and that there were post-war conditions and difficulties in the way, and we had a promise that there would be a reduction in the tariff. I do not know that I object to the tariff so much as to that feature of it which is called protection, and which continually exploits one class of the community to build up another. That is the part I object to. The amendment is more elaborate than I should like, but there are principles in it which I feel will compel me to give it my support.

Mr. HATFIELD: Did I understand the hon. member to say that he supported the budget last year?

Mr. SEXSMITH: Yes.

Mr. HATFIELD: Did the hon. member's party support it?

Mr. SEXSMITH: No, not all.

Breezy Ontario M.P.

George Grant Halcrow, M.P.P. for East Hamilton, is—by his own confession—an Ishmaelite. As Gilbert and Sullivan might have put it:

"For he himself has said it,
And it's greatly to his credit,
That he is an Ishmaelite."

It was during a recent debate in the Legislature, that Mr. Halcrow christened the Independent group with which he now sits, "the Ishmaelites," and the sobriquet has stuck.

Elected as a Labor candidate in the election of 1919, Mr. Halcrow was for two years House leader of the Labor members. But his views on temperance and other issues differing from those of the Government, he transferred his allegiance a year ago, and now sits in the rear row of the benches on Mr. Speaker's left.

Mr. Halcrow still remains a Labor representative, in thought, word and deed, in his case, the three are almost one, for he is outspoken in voicing his sentiments, and equally prompt in acting upon them. He has little patience with Parliamentary technicalities. When cautioned by the Speaker on a point of order, during a recent session, he convulsed the House with silent merriment, by demanding in some surprise, "What's the big idea, Mr. Speaker?"

Too Much Taxation.

The statement by the Duke of Bedford, given prominence in the Sunday newspapers, that of every sovereign he received the state took twelve shillings and three pence in taxation, finds echo in the assertion of W. D. Trethewey, the well-known Cobalt millionaire mine-owner, that he is giving up his large private farm in England and returning to Canada because of the impossible heavy taxation there. The taxation authorities in England are absolutely without imagination, he told the correspondent. "They are killing productive enterprise." I shall return to Toronto and live on the land I own there," he concluded.

Coal In the Belgian Congo.

A valuable find for the future of the Belgian Congo is the discovery of large deposits of coal, one on Lake Tanganyika, and the other on the Luena. The Tanganyika deposit contains five veins, varying from two feet six inches to five feet six inches in thickness, with an aggregate thickness of sixteen feet. It is estimated that these deposits contain over one billion tons of coal. The Luena deposit has a total thickness of about twenty-one feet, covers five hundred acres, and includes about 16,000,000 tons of coal.

Lepers In Canada.

Rev. H. N. Konkle, secretary for the whole of Canada for the mission to lepers, says that at present there are two thousand lepers in the United States, according to estimates made by medical authorities. In Canada there are only seventeen lepers segregated in two leper asylums, one on the west coast in British Columbia, about fifteen miles from Victoria, and known as D'Arcy Island, and the other at Tracadie, off the coast of New Brunswick. There are estimated to be about two million lepers in the world, scattered among all the countries.

When asked what results had been obtained from the new cure for leprosy announced some time ago, Mr. Konkle said that what they called a temporary cure had been discovered and that some good results had been accomplished from it. It could not yet be called a permanent cure, however.

The authorities were hopeful that in the near future they would effect a cure that would be certain.

A Great Prime Minister.

How many men who have emigrated in search of fame and fortune have succeeded to such an extent that they have become Prime Ministers of the country of their adoption? This is the record of Mr. W. M. Hughes, who has resigned after being Australia's Premier for eight years.

Nearly forty years ago Mr. Hughes left England and landed in Australia, penniless and without work. For a time he wandered about doing any odd jobs that came his way. Policeman, bookseller, actor, and railwayman—all these roles were filled by the future Prime Minister. Only ten years after he had landed Mr. Hughes was elected to Parliament, where he quickly made his name.

WIRELESS CONVENIENCES.

French Scientist Has Unique Inventions In His Home.

Waking by wireless from the Eiffel Tower is likely to become the fashion in the near future.

At break of day or at any hour that may be chosen wireless waves can be used to draw aside the window curtains and flood the room with sunlight, while a phonograph can be set in motion announcing that it is time to get up.

The wireless will then open a small table placed beside the bed, and on an electric stove water for the morning tea, coffee, or chocolate can be set boiling.

These are some of the novel conveniences enjoyed by a distinguished French wireless authority, Prof. Franchette, president of the French Society of Wireless Telegraph and Telephony.

The professor's house is a veritable mystery museum, of scientific devices. He has achieved wonders with wireless, and his inventions have enabled him to reduce his domestic staff to a minimum.

In addition to wireless clocks, barometers, thermometers, seismographs, and receiving and transmitting outfits, all of remarkable precision, there is to be seen there a complete model printing press with everything required for binding and decorating books.

The professor's wireless set enables him to listen-in all over the world, and by the aid of a special compass to locate the transmitting point of the message. Last summer he had the unenviable experience of following a tragedy at sea.

It was on a beautiful summer evening. The professor was seated in his listening-in room. Presently there came the flash of the wireless instruments and the tick-tick of an S.O.S.

It was from a steamer in the North Sea. A wireless station replied asking for the steamer's position. After that there was silence. The tragedy had been consummated.

Some nights, when insomnia robs Prof. Franchette of his sleep, a luminous dial projects on the ceiling above him the latest wireless news from all over the world.

A Unique Animal.

An extraordinary survival of the animal life of 3,000,000 years ago has been reported as still flourishing in certain parts of South America. The little animal, which looks like a sharp-nosed rat, with rounded ears, slender tail, and soft brown hair, was discovered in Venezuela by Dr. Wilfred H. Osgood, of the Field Museum of Natural History. In "A Monographic Study of the American Marsupial, Caenolestes," Dr. Osgood says: "This little animal is quite unlike any other now living in the world. Although it does resemble closely any species now living, it is very intimately related to animals which flourished far back in geologic times, when the foundations were being laid for the evolution of the higher animals of the present day. All the others of the group to which it belongs became extinct ages ago, and Caenolestes alone has survived to the present. We know this because its bones and teeth are essentially the same as those of the extinct animals." If the bones are the same it is probable that other parts are also similar. Therefore Caenolestes is a prize to the student, adds Dr. Osgood, for it enables him to learn more about the ancient fossils than is shown by their bones, which of course are the only parts preserved.

A LONG WHITE WAY.

Roads Are to Be Lighted In Province of Quebec.

Now they are going to light two great highways in the Province of Quebec, turning the old-time country road into a modified Great White Way. These roads—from Montreal to Quebec, and from Montreal to the United States boundary — bear an enormous burden of traffic, but until recently they were just rural highways, winding through picturesque and sleepy villages. Now the clean sweep of permanent way will be dotted with lights, giving, let us hope, a measure of safety for horse-drawn vehicles and pedestrians from speeding motorists.

An earlier generation would turn in its grave at such progress. Good roads alone have meant much for farmers, but lighted roads, wherever they are possible, will add to the urbanization of country life. They are a striking change from the days of deep mud, on a rainy night, horses plunging through the dark, now on the road, now in the ditch; speed two miles an hour, wagon smothered with mud, driver disconsolate and wishing he were anywhere else in the world at that moment. Perhaps he had a lantern, and it was extinguished by the wheel of the mud. When he got home there was darkness everywhere; now the electric light in the house and in the stable.

Even this picture of pre-highway days is a great improvement on the conditions of the pioneers. In Lord Durham's famous report on conditions in Canada in 1838 there is this illuminating statement by the Chief Agent for Emigration in Upper Canada:

"In 1834 I met a settler from the township of Warwick, on the Caradoc Plains, returning from a grist mill at Westminster with the flour and bran of 13 bushels of wheat. He had a yoke of oxen and a horse attached to his wagon, and had been absent nine days, and did not expect to reach home until the following evening. Light as his load was, he assured me that he had to unload, wholly or in part, several times, and after driving his wagon through the swamps, to pick out a road through the woods where the swamps or gullies were fordable, and to carry the bags on his back and replace them in the wagon.

"Supposing the services of the man and his team to be worth $2 per day, the expense of transport would be $20. As the freight on wheat from Toronto to Liverpool, England, is rather less than two shillings and six pence per bushel, it follows that a person living in this city could get the same wheat ground on the banks of the Mersey and the flour and bran returned to him at a much less expense than he could transport it from the rear of Warwick to Westminster and back, a distance of less than 90 miles."

Gambling In Spain.

The Liberal Spanish Government has begun taking measures against gambling, a vice which of recent years has spread enormously in Spain. There is hardly a town, however small, where, in some casino or club a roulette table is not in operation. In the larger towns roulette tables contribute a percentage toward the charitable institutions. The demoralizing effects of the vice are also apparent in the army, where gambling takes place in the military casinos.

From a single seed planted in a flower pot in Florida less than twenty years ago the "Chinese velvet" has developed into one of the most popular varieties of bean grown in the south.

Topping the grain shipments from St. John of the 1921-22 winter season by almost four million bushels and establishing a record for the port for volume in a single shipment of one vessel, the 1922-23 grain business through the Canadian Pacific elevators up to May 1st totalled 15,249,261 bushels. The single shipments' record was made on an all-wheat cargo of 359,793 bushels.

MISHAPS AT WEDDINGS.

Groom Had Long Search to Secure a License.

Stories of unexpected or amusing happenings at weddings are numerous, and form a large part of the off-guard conversation of some clergymen. The happy events are not always the smooth and cut-and-dried affairs they are represented to be in the society news columns. It would be an illuminating experiment for a newspaper to write up weddings with the same realism applied to politics or railway accidents, for instance, but it is probable that the experiment would fall owing to the opposition of the "contracting parties" and their parents, to give terribly exact ideas of what should be said.

A wedding story told by Longfellow is contained in a new book, "Memories of a Hostess" (Mrs. James T. Fields), by M. A. DeWolfe Howe:

Longfellow gave him an account of the wedding of a schoolmate of mine, ——, an excellent, generous-hearted, generously built woman, with a little limping old clergyman who has already had three wives, and whose first name is ——. Longfellow said, in memory of what had gone before, the organist, as if driven by some evil spirit, played "Auld Lang Syne" as the wedding processive began, consisting of the bride and her brother, two very well-made large persons, and the elderly bridegroom limping on behind all alone. The organist suddenly stopped at this point, broke off with a queer little quirk and shiver as if he only then discovered what he was doing. Indeed, the whole wedding appeared to have points to affect the risibles of the poet. He could hardly speak of it without laughter.

This had almost a parallel in the case of a Toronto wedding some years ago. It was a church wedding, and on New Year's Day. The groom, who was from the United States, where marriage customs are different in some details, arrived at the church all ready, as he thought, but alas! when asked for the license, he had none. No one had posted him on this important detail. The minister refused, of course, to act without this document.

The groom entered his cab (it was before motor cars were so universal) again, and drove out Queen street west for miles before he found a license vendor whose place was open. He was absent nearly an hour, and, meantime, the assembled guests, numbering several hundred, were greatly puzzled, and craned their necks and strained their ears for some light on the mystery. Had the bride been deserted at the altar; was the train late; or what had happened? Fortunately the organist had a sense of humor, and he continued his program of music, interspersing the "set" pieces with such old favorites in another sphere as "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight" and "Will He Ne'er Come Back Again?"

TAILS OF ANIMALS.

They Are Used for Defence and Also for Conversation.

Prof. Giuseppe Renato some time ago published an exhaustive study on the various functions of animals' tails, and the learned dissertation of the Italian scientist has aroused wide interest all over the world.

Dogs' tails occupy an important chapter in Prof. Renato's book.

Passing lightly over the fact that in the arctic regions the tail performs the functions of respiratory organs while the dog is asleep, Prof. Renato considers it evident that this appendage furnishes a dog's vocal apparatus, in the shape of its conversational faculty.

"Above all," says the professor, "the tail of a dog is a mirror to its psychological state. The animal raises and wags it under the impression of joy, lowers it when afflicted, and trails it between his legs when frightened.

One may naturally believe that dogs have a definite language, and that the wagging of the tail is the method of communication between them.

Amongst cattle and beasts of burden, the professor points out that the tail is a weapon of defence against flies and other insects, which, in the natural state of those animals, meant often the saving of their lives.

He states that in the early struggle for existence in cattledom and horsedom the question of the survival of the fittest was purely a question of which had the strongest tail. This resulted in the development of the tail muscles of the cow and horse to a remarkable degree.

When a horse is struck on the back with a whip it switches the spot with its tail. The horse knows it was a whip and not an insect, but the reflexive muscles of its tail are so highly developed that it instinctively switches before the horse has time to telegraph to his brain and put in a stop order.

A cow finds it less fatiguing to keep up a perpetual up-and-down, side-to-side motion with its tail, rather than the nervous, energetic one which the horse employs only when there is actual occasion.

Ninety Feet of Trousers.

In the Balkans, where women tend goats and cattle in the mountains, it is necessary for them to wear trousers; skirts would be too cumbersome among the rocks. In Albania, however, especially at Scutari, there is a writer, women wear trousers in accordance with an old custom. An Albanian woman takes pride in wearing trousers as voluminous as possible, and as a result the garments do not in the least resemble the ordinary masculine attire with which we associate the word, but appear like tremendously full, heavy skirts. The richer the woman is the more extensive are the trousers, and it is not at all uncommon to see women wearing trousers that are made of ninety feet or more of cloth. When an Albanian girl is to be married all her relatives contribute to provide her with trousers as well as with the full costume of an Albanian woman, including gaps adorned with gems and pearls and with gold ornaments. The complete dress weighs more than sixty pounds. It is no wonder, therefore, that to take quick steps is impossible, and that when the women are at home they sit cross-legged.

A Loaf of Bread.

The exact size of a loaf of bread is determined by a new machine, shown in Popular Mechanics Magazine, and designed by the Department of Agriculture while making tests to fix the standard volume of a loaf. A funnel is filled with flaxseed, and the loaf to be tested is placed in a container, of known cubic capacity, immediately below. The flaxseed is then allowed to pour in until the loaf is completely imprisoned. Any overflow will fall into pans, placed at the sides for that purpose. At the bottom of the container is a small valve, which, when opened, permits the seed to fall into a narrow graduated container. The measure of the seed in this container, when poured from the known cubic capacity of the larger container, gives the size of the loaf.

Origin of the Ring.

In the course of a lecture on "Precious Stones," Prof. Gordon said that early jewellery did not seem to have been set in rings.

One of the earliest examples of the use of rings in statuary was in the statues of Prometheus, who, when released from bondage on the intercession of Venus, wore a ring with a small piece of the Caucasus in it to show that he was still chained to the Caucasus. The idea of a ring being a sign of bondage had continued since those days.

Bishops and doctors wore rings by right because they had signed away their independence in order to benefit mankind.

Islands of Ice.

Do you know why ice forms on the surface of ponds during frosty weather?

The reason is that when the temperature is a little above freezing point, the water increases in bulk and becomes lighter, so that the ice, when formed, floats on the surface.

When we look at a frozen pond it doesn't appear capable of supporting much weight, does it? Yet it is really very strong, for ice one inch and a half thick will support a man; ten inches thick will support a cannon; and eighteen inches thick will support a modern railway engine.

Various ice marks on the mountain sides of Southern Canada have recently caused geologists to estimate that at one time ice must have laid 1,500 feet deep in those parts!

Ever since the Titanic sank after striking an iceberg, an ice patrol regularly searches the North Atlantic Ocean for icebergs and sends news of their positions by wireless to other vessels.

Some of these icebergs are one hundred feet high, but the amount of ice showing above water represents only one-eighth of the size of the actual berg.

The spring is the most dangerous time for vessels, for this is when the bergs begin to split up and break without any warning.

Many thrilling stories are told of flights with these huge masses. On some occasions after a ship has collided with one, the sailors have saved their lives by clambering upon the iceberg itself.

It has also been known for ships in the icy regions to hitch themselves on to icebergs and be towed for many miles. This has usually occurred when fuel has run short.

Honest now, what is it that you do, that gives you quite the satisfaction that a little cleaning-up and painting-up does?

It sure does beat the Dutch the way a little paint will make a thing "look like a million dollars."

There are many cases where $100 spent in painting a house, has made it sell for $500 more. So whether or not you want to sell your house, a coat of Lowe Brothers paint makes it look as if you "had money in the bank" as the old saying goes.

Drop in and let's talk it over.

Late F. W. VanDusen.

The many friends of Mr. F. W. VanDusen, a former business man of Napanee, were shocked to hear of his sudden death at his home in Toronto, on Wednesday morning. Mr. VanDusen suffered a stroke on Saturday and did not rally. Mr. VanDusen was a descendant of Conrad VanDusen, a United Empire Loyalist, of Prince Edward County, in which county Mr. VanDusen was born in 1862. While in Napanee he became a member of the Masonic and other fellow societies and took great interest in fraternal work, especially in the work of Napanee Lodge No. 86. He was also a charter member of the Canadian Order of Home Circles. Besides his widow he leaves three children, Mr. W. J. VanDusen, Napanee, and Mrs. W. Gingell and Mrs. A. Weir, both of Toronto. The remains were brought to Napanee and the funeral took place on Thursday afternoon, from the residence of his son, to Riverside cemetery. Oddfellow service was also conducted at the residence by members of Napanee lodge.

A Delightful Concert.

Grace Church was filled with a large and appreciative audience on Monday night, May 14th, when Miss Frances Nickawa made her first appearance in Napanee. Miss Nickawa is a real artist. One of her principal charms is her pleasant, unaffected manner. She has a sweet, well-modulated voice, which was heard to good advantage both in reading and in singing. Miss Nickawa delighted her audience from her first appearance on the platform ; she was, however, even more attractive in the second half of the programme, when she appeared in her native costume. Her introductions to her readings were unique, original, humorous, and entirely delightful. Her numbers were all so excellent that it is impossible to single out any for particular mention. Those who had the privilege of hearing her enjoyed a rare treat, which they will long remember. Miss Nickawa was assisted by some of the best local talent. The vocalists were Mesdames Bradley, Elliott and Seymour and Messrs. Black and Paul, who appeared in trio and quartette, and who, as usual, gave pleasure to their audience. When Mrs. Black and Miss Aletha Scott took their places at the piano we expected something good and we were not disappointed. Miss Rowena Smith's piano solo was very greatly enjoyed, and Mrs. Wilson's violin selections added to her already great popularity. Mr. F. L. Hooper made a very efficient chairman.

Not Sick Once in Four Years Now

Mrs. Smith Declares Health Has Been Perfect Since Tanlac Ended Stomach Trouble.

"For ten years hardly a day passed that I didn't suffer from stomach trouble, but I took Tanlac four years ago and haven't had a sick day since," is the remarkable statement made recently by Mrs. Thamar Smith, 85 McGee St., Toronto, Ont.

"The little I managed to eat simply tortured me with pains in the pit of my stomach, and gas pressed around my heart causing it to skip beats until I thought it would stop altogether. I was as nervous as a witch, and lost so much sleep that I was dark and swollen under my eyes. I was so weak and run down I could hardly walk a block or do my housework, and was almost in despair.

"Tanlac certainly was a godsend in restoring me to such perfect health, and I think it's the greatest medicine ever made. Nearly everybody else on McGee street seems to have used the treatment, and are praising it too."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

ROGERS STILL AT LARGE.

He May Attempt to Commit Two More Murders.

NORTH BAY, May 21.—After five days of freedom, during which he has terrorized the entire country from North Bay south to Powassan, and east to Mattawa, Leo Rogers, ex-convict and murderer of Constable Fred Lefebre, has the police forces of North Bay and the province completely baffled. The week-end has passed without the slightest development that would lead the observer to suppose that the end of the hunt was near. A reward of $1,500 has been offered for the capture of this desperate man.

The police are faced with two theories of his present whereabouts. He is either lying in wait somewhere in the bush between Callander and Bonfield, or he has caught a freight out of the district.

In the first case it is believed he will again make his appearance in North Bay to complete his avowed intention of killing Chief of Police Morbey and Magistrate Weegar. The latter, sentenced him, a little over seven years ago, to a term of servitude at Kingston Penitentiary. Should he, on the other hand, have succeeded in jumping a freight there is every reason to suppose that he is now miles away. In such an event there is little hope that he will be caught.

Rogers has a reputation of being one of the surest shots in Northern Ontario, although he as yet has never been known to "pull a gun" in any of his many captures.

Forces of Provincial Police in pursuit of Rogers now number about 27 and these are being aided by more than a score of specially sworn constables.

Even the Town Hall and Police Station at North Bay are guarded day and night. Every road leading into the town is picketed and travelled by day or night may witness the unique spectacle of a sturdy Northerner, with rifle in hand and a belt of cartridges, leaning against the rocks that skirt the eastern and southern boundaries of the corporation. Farmhouses of people on the way to Callander, where it is believed that Rogers has a number of personal sympathizers, have been searched and are now under surveillance. Never since the days when North Bay was a railway construction camp has there been evidence of such warlike intent or so many men on the street with holsters dangling from their waists.

John Rogers, father of Leo Rogers, is in jail, charged with aiding and abetting the ex-convict to escape. It is alleged that with his father's knowledge, Rogers obtained a .32 special Winchester rifle from his home scarcely more than half an an hour after he had made his getaway from the district courtroom.

TRIED TO SHOOT OFFICER.

Ottawa Man Was Being Arrested for Stealing Auto.

HAMILTON, May 21. — Oscar Barrier, Ottawa, early Sunday attempted to take the life of Charles Gent, motorcycle officer, when the constable apprehended him after a thrilling chase down the Brantford-Hamilton Highway. In the scuffle, which occurred on Dundurn street, after Fournier had deserted the car, the prisoner had a piece of flesh torn from his right hand, near the thumb, when the revolver in his hand was discharged as Gent wrestled with him. Four times the revolver clicked while Fournier pointed it directly at the officer. Rim fire cartridges which failed to explode in the centre-fire gun alone saved Gent's death.

Fournier is now in the cells, charged with attempting to kill a police officer, shooting with intent and stealing an automobile. George Thomas Henry Ross, Guelph, his companion, is also held on a charge of stealing the auto.

When the officer accosted Fournier he (Fournier) pulled a revolver from his back pocket and placed it against Gent's stomach. "Throw them up," he demanded. Gent caught his hand and a scuffled followed, during which the revolver was discharged, and the bullet tore flesh from Fournier's hand, near his thumb. He was taken to the General Hospital, and after the wound was dressed, was removed to the cells. Gent's gameness alone was responsible for the capture of the prisoner, who was a much larger man.

Valuable Pictures Destroyed.

OTTAWA, May 21.—Many valuable oil paintings and photographs were destroyed or badly damaged when fire destroyed the club rooms of the St. Andrew's Society here Friday night. While the damage to the building and the furniture is estimated at approximately $500, covered by insurance, the loss in art pictures and photographs which cannot be replaced is heavy. Two large oil paintings, the charge of the Scots Greys, entitled "Scotland Forever," a copy of the famous painting by Miss Thompson in 1792, done by Grey Hailyer, and a painting of the late Sir James Grant, are totally destroyed.

RANEY CHANGES MIND

Attorney-General Will Not Retire from Provincial Politics.

He Has Accepted the U.F.O. Nomination in East Wellington and Will Continue to Support Premier Drury—His Friends Are Satisfied With His Enforcement of the O.T.A.

FERGUS, May 21.—After writing three weeks ago to the secretary of the U.F.O. executive committee that he would not allow his name to be put again before the electors of East Wellington, Hon. W. E. Raney, Premier Drury's Attorney-General, on Saturday afternoon motored to Fergus and at a meeting of the executive, held previous to the convention of the Farmers in the Fergus Opera House, that it was desired he would withdraw his letter of retirement and accept the nomination if it was offered to him.

After calling the meeting to order, President J. A. Douglas, proceeded to break the news that Mr. Raney has agreed to the plea of the association, declaring that if the people of East Wellington wanted him, he was willing to serve as their representative."

About this time the Attorney-General entered the hall and was given a good reception. He stated briefly that since he had decided to retire it had been strongly impressed upon him by the Premier, members of the Cabinet, and others, who had been augmented by representations from his constituency in East Wellington, that it was his duty to remain in the contest.

After thinking the question over carefully, at the last minute he had decided to continue on—if they wanted him to do so.

It was then moved by W. A. Burnett, of Nichol Township, seconded by ex-Warden Milloy, of Hillsburg, that Mr. W. E. Raney again be the candidate of the United Farmers in East Wellington. In making the nomination, both his sponsors dwelt on the fact that Mr. Raney had been up against a hard proposition in the enforcement of the O.T.A., in whose administration they contended he had been firm and had done well. No others were mentioned, and the nomination was carried amidst cheers.

Hon. Mr. Raney accepted and expressed his thanks for the confidence reposed in him. He told his former friends, though, that they would have to bear the major portion of the burden of the campaign, as he would have very little time to spare in the riding, though he would continue to do all he could for it, and its people.

SAVED BY A SANDBAR.

Yacht and Crew Almost Went Over Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 21.—The Sunbeam, formerly an American submarine chaser, on Saturday narrowly escaped going over the Horse Shoe Falls, with its crew of five men, and is wedged in the rocks in the rapids in front of the Toronto Power Company's power house, near the brink of the Falls, about 900 feet from shore. It broke away from its moorings at Chippawa, where it was anchored, and came down the rapids. Its crew was rescued and arrived on the right side. There is no hope of salvaging it.

The boat, valued at $30,000, was purchased from the American Government by T. Seymour Lasker, of the Lasker Construction Company, of Chicago, who intended to make it into a private yacht. Mr. Lasker took three men with him from Chicago, to take the boat from New York to Chicago, by water. They were Charles McMahon, captain; H. A. Lorenzen, engineer, and a cook. The boat arrived at Tonawanda, N.Y., from New York on Thursday. Saturday they started from Tonawanda with the intention of going to Buffalo, Cleveland and thence to Chicago. Through a fog, Buffalo, a lake boat seaman, was added to the crew at Tonawanda, as a deck man.

The captain, instead of going up the river, went down, which brought them to Chippawa. None of the crew had ever been in this direction before. Mr. Lasker was in the ensine room, the cook was in bed, and Lee was the only one on deck besides the captain.

Lee, in telling the story said: "As we neared the mouth of the Chippawa Creek, I saw men signalling and waving for us to go back. I saw the rapids ahead and shouted to the captain that there was danger ahead, but he did not pay any attention. Just then we struck a sandbar. We would have gone over the Falls if we had not struck the bar."

The Hydro employes got the crew safely to shore by putting out in row-boats for them. The Sunbeam was then anchored there for the night. Mr. Lasker did not think it could be removed, and last night sold it to Lee. This morning, however, it broke loose and is now beyond human reach.

Another Rumor Nailed.

LONDON, England, May 21.—A rumor was running the forthcoming engagement of the Prince of Wales has been followed by a prompt denial.

As the prince, during his visit to Swansea, was the guest of Lord and Lady Blythswood at Penrice Castle, this led many people to suggest that the Hon. Alice Douglas-Campbell, Lord Blythswood's only daughter was destined to be the bride of the prince. But when Lady Blythswood was asked about it she said:

"There is no truth whatever in the rumor."

$30,000 In Jewels Stolen.

MONTREAL, May 21.—Precious stones to the value of $30,000 were stolen Friday night from the offices of J. L. Sabbath and Co., Notre Dame street west, wholesale jewelers, by thieves who entered the premises and blew open a safe with nitro-glycerine. The burglars obtained entry into the Sabbath building by a false key.

This is the second time this firm has been robbed. In April, 1922, thieves broke into the office and secured jewels valued at $10,000. Most of the stolen stones were found in Toronto.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, May 21.—A firmer cattle market was apparent on Monday as Stock Yards last week and a heavier offering was well cleaned up before the close. A keen demand for all killing classes was shown, while there was also a good demand for cattle for the overseas market. Prices strengthened, with butcher cattle selling about 50c a hundred higher and heavy steers at an advance of 25c a hundred.

Exports were active in the market as boat space was available at Montreal for all requirements. Fat export steers sold from $7.75 to $8.25 for the bulk. Choice export steers for one load brought from $7.50 to $8. A few loads, however, found their way back to the country at from $6.25 to $7 a hundred.

A continuation of the present firm market is looked for but only a moderate offering will be wanted this week. The market will be closed Thursday, the 24th, and the big markets will be, it is expected, on Monday and Tuesday. The United Farmers' Co-operative Co. are of the opinion that from now on shippers can send to their stock to suit the convenience of their customers, whether export, finished, export store or butcher.

Export shipments for the last week totalled 550 steers for loading at Montreal and 301 fat steers for Newport News. Choice butcher steers sold from $7.60 to $8.a hundred. Few butcher steers changing hands quickly were weighed up below $7 a hundred. Cows sold up to $6.50, with the bulk of the best butchers from $6.40 to $6. Bulls were in demand for export from $5 to $5.50.

Trading in hogs was easier last week despite the efforts of the salesmen to hold the market firm. The run was considerably heavier than in the previous week and prices were reduced 25c to 50c a hundred. The market generally closed at $13 on the fed and watered basis.

Under a heavy run of calves the market held steady. The bulk of the choice calves sold from $10.50 to $11.50 a hundred, with odd sales at $12. Common calves sold as low as $5 a hundred.

Spring lambs sold a shade higher than on the previous week, the best bringing from $19 to $18 each. Trade was strong on the sheep side offered, the choice light sind bringing from $9 to $10 a hundred. Few yearling lambs offered for sale.

Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards for the week ending market were: Cars, 206; cattle, 5,705; calves, 628; hogs, 6,061; sheep, 179.

WHERE THE DRUG PEDLARS FLOURISH.

The Saskatoon Daily Star thus deals with the claim that the drug traffic increases under Prohibition:

"In the past year (1921) over the whole of Canada, there were 835 convictions on charges initiated by the Federal authorities under the Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act. These were located as follows:

British Columbia..... 315
Quebec..... 237

"Of these all but 21 were in Montreal, which is the wettest point in Canada.)

"Ontario—a Province larger than Quebec and with a much greater city population—reported only 66 all told.

"Of the 835 for the whole Dominion, 552 were reported from the two wet provinces, and only 283 from all the rest of Canada."

The Drink Traffic and the Drug Traffic flourish together.

So alarmed are British Columbia authorities over the increase in drug peddling since Prohibition was repealed, they are making strenuous appeals to the Dominion Government to tighten the penalties on drug traffickers. L. J. Ladner, (Conservative) Vancouver, submitted an amendment providing for the lash, where sale was made to minors.

In "wet" Montreal in three weeks, eight persons died and 30 others were admitted to the hospitals as the result of drug poisoning.

Children Drowned in Well.

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que., May 21. —Five children of Thomas Houle, of St. Nicholas, a small parish three miles from here, were drowned in a well Saturday afternoon, when the temporary cover on which they were standing tilted, and plunged them into the water. The fatality occurred a short distance from the Houle home.

The children ranged in age from six to two years.

One other, a baby one year old, escaped, owing to the fact that he was not old enough to clamber upon the cover.

Houle was about to take the children for an automobile drive. He was in the garage at the time of the happening of the tragedy, and called to them to get ready. Receiving no answer he went to the spot and saw the five bodies floating in the water. The children were dead when taken out of the well.

"It's True—Every Word."

Cullen looked at Hilliard and made a swift deduction, and spoke it.

"He's waiting for the rest of it. Go on—you're only half through the yarn you got for us."

"Oh, very well." Waring gathered courage. "You can have all you want—maybe more than you want. You'd have had it sooner if you hadn't started yelling at me. I know what I'm talking about; you people don't seem to realize I'm in the law! I don't go off half-cocked. I wrote to a law firm in Butte, Montana, that's what I did. I found out what was the biggest firm there, and I wrote 'em a letter. They answered it, too. I got my information right from the ground. I've got a letter that says—"

Cullen swayed forward, his hand outstretched, palm-upward, in a direct challenge of Waring's truthfulness.

"Where is it?"

The boy withdrew a step and stammered: "I left it home."

"Oh, you did!" Cullen's laugh was stinging. "That's likely!"

"Yes, that's exactly what I did! Think I'd bring an original letter out of my office—let it out of my hands until it's time to make it of record? Not on your life! I've got it all right. It says the Silvertow Mining corporation owns some acreage, fast enough, but there isn't a mine on it—"

Cullen vented his abandon of rage on the empty air.

"Well, who in the devil ever said there was?"

"Why . . . didn't you?" The appeal was to Hilliard; and it was made in a tone of astonishment which would have been ludicrous if there hadn't been tragedy behind it.

"No." Hilliard shook his head. "You can't accuse me of that, at least. . . . The only mine we ever mentioned was one in prospect. I always said it was a prospect, with an old shaft on it it didn't." And again to him: "But an old shaft isn't a producing mine, necessarily. And—please let him finish, Mr. Cullen!"

"Well . . ." The boy had twin disks of hectic flame in his cheeks. "That's only a detail, anyway . . . they said it was . . . undeveloped . . . they said the shaft had been abandoned more than two years ago, because it wasn't worth much of anything—"

Cullen's hands were closing and unclosing appolectically.

"For Heaven's sake, who ever said it wasn't! two years ago! We all know that! Give us some news, young man, give us some news!"

Waring was breathing hard, and his interest had switched to Angela, who stood adamant. Indeed, he was suddenly transformed to the status of a supplicant rather than that of a prosecuting witness.

"Well . . . they said it was offered . . . two years ago . . . to anybody who'd take it . . . for ten thousand dollars . . . and nobody'd take it as a gift . . ."

"Oh, good Lord!" Cullen was near to bursting. "Doesn't the fool know what a prospect is? Hasn't he seen the reports? And still he—"

"And . . . and the next to it was . . . had a mine on it, the XLNC mine, that's in pretty fair shape, but that didn't signify anything. . . ." He paused for a moment. "And there hasn't been any work done on it, to speak of, for two years. . . . And the corporation report I got shows that a fellow named Martin Harmon's the president of it, and Harmon's a cheap Wall street man in New York. The Butte people don't consider him reliable. And I've written to him four times—and he won't answer."

"Ah!" said Hilliard, startled.

"Well?" Cullen repeated his challenge.

"That's all." He gazed beseechingly at Angela, who sniffed and turned her head away.

"All!" Cullen breathed stertorously. "And with a flimsy lot of rot like that you've got the unmitigated gall to start a slanderous story like this about Henry Hilliard! You've got the nerve to—"

"The astonishing part of it," interposed Hilliard, with coolness which astonished even himself, "is that every single item of it is true! Don't blame him, Mr. Cullen. It's true—every word."

"Of course it's true! Isn't it what you've told us yourself, in a different way! It's the telling of it that counts!"

"Now listen to me a moment!" Hilliard was impassively serious; the way to the denouement was opening clear before him. He need only offer himself for judgment, and the future would take care of itself. "My purpose in coming up here this afternoon was to talk to you about this same property, Mr. Cullen. I . . . I had some rather important things to tell you about it. But in view of this new attitude of Waring's, I'm going to act differently. This won't stop here, and I prefer to have somebody look into it before it's any worse. I'm going to put myself in your hands. Rufus and Angela, I want you both to witness this. . . . Mr. Cullen, I'm going to give you a check for eight thousand dollars; it's my whole balance at the Trust and Deposit company, less what I'll need to live on for a few days. I'm going to turn over to you twenty thousand shares in the Silvertow Mining corporation to keep for me—it's my own personal holding. I'm going to turn over to you my contract with the mining corporation, which calls for the delivery of all the rest of the corporate stock on payment of a hundred and twenty thousand dollars, of which we've already paid sixty-two. I'll give you the corporation's receipt to me for that amount. And I give you my word of honor not to step foot outside of the city of Syracuse, nor to be for one single hour out of your reach until you've investigated the whole proposition from beginning to end. I insist that you make that investigation. That's on condition that Rufus won't mention this again, either here or anywhere else, until he's collected the facts. And I'll tell you right now Rufus has given you his word!"

"My dear man!" Cullen's tone was conciliating. "We know all that! We've gone into this with our eyes open. We're not buying a productive mine; we're buying a good prospect."

"Since I saw you last," Hilliard's voice broke, "I've reason to fear that it isn't as good as we hoped."

"There!" Waring was jubilant. "Listen to that, now! What did I tell you?"

"We went into it with our eyes open," said Cullen, after a pause. "You told us from the very first it wasn't an absolute certainty—good Lord, what business proposition ever is? Besides— He let the fact of scorn to Waring. "I don't care who knows where I stand on this deal or any other. I don't buy properties; I back men. I'm banking on you, Hilliard. I'm putting my money back of you. I'm counting on you to make good—if that Montana thing falls down cold, I know you'd make it right with me—if I'd let you. But I wouldn't. When I'm sold, I'm sold for keeps, and I'm sold on you. I'm taking the risk just as you are. So . . ."

"Thank you." Hilliard's appreciation was in the nature of a stiff bow. "I'm afraid you're exaggerating a little, though. . . ."

"Not one syllable!"

Hilliard was patently grateful.

"At any rate, I'm going to do as I said . . . you'll keep those things for me, won't you? As security, or evidence of good faith, or whatever you want to call it?"

"Nonsense! For a flare-up like this! Ridiculous!"

"But I insist," said Hilliard. "And I want you to make an investigation—a thorough one." He smiled grimly; Dicky Morgan was safe forever. "I know in advance what you'll find."

"So do I. Oh, well, I know how you feel. If you want to be whitewashed, I suppose I'll have to act as a sort of trustee for you—it's tommyrot, but if you want it, I won't refuse. Send me the stuff and I'll put it away for you where it'll be safe. And Rufus here will be over to

MILK PASTEURIZATION

Making Milk Safe for Use in the Family.

Pasteurization Is Not Sterilization—Diseases Transmitted by Milk—Combat Against Pasteurization — "Safety First" a Good Practice.

Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The process applied to milk, that we know as pasteurization, was originally used by Pasteur to prevent the souring of wines and beer, and it is now universally applied in the control of milk supplies of large cities. At first it was intended for the preservation of milk, that is, to prevent souring, but now it is used solely with the idea of destroying disease-producing micro-organisms.

Pasteurization Is Not Sterilization.

Pasteurization is not sterilization. A much greater heat is required to sterilize than is applied in the former process. Pasteurization consists of heating the milk to a temperature of not less than 140 degrees and not more than 150 degs. F., for a period of not less than 20 and not more than 30 minutes, and then rapidly cooling it to 45 degs. F., or under, and keeping it at that temperature until delivered to the consumer. In addition to this, every care must be taken to have a clean product. The process does not remove dirt; therefore those responsible for the supervision of milk supplies insist on a high quality of milk for Pasteurization.

No matter how carefully milk is handled and how well cows are inspected there still remains the danger of the carrier, that is, a person harboring the germs of a disease and yet not affected by them; or of the person who is developing an infectious disease, yet is not sick enough to stop working. These people may unwittingly infect the milk by coughing, sneezing, by their soiled hands when milking or washing vessels, or indirectly in many other ways. It is true that if the milk is kept cold these disease-producing bacteria will not multiply, but they may remain alive and fully virulent for a long time and the original number be sufficient to cause infection.

Disease Transmitted by Milk.

Some of the diseases of man that may be transmitted by milk are: Septic sore throat, typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria and tuberculosis. Some animal diseases transmissible to man through milk are: Tuberculosis; cow pox, which may cause infection of the digestive tract in young children; mastitis, which may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances; foot and mouth disease; tremblers; actinomycosis and others. Pasteurization destroys the organisms that are the cause of all the foregoing diseases. In regard to bovine tuberculosis it is known that though adults may be relatively immune to infection from a bovine source, children are quite susceptible, and a considerable percentage of cases of tuberculosis in young children can be shown to be of bovine origin. There are certain biological differences in the bacilli from humans and cattle which make it possible to differentiate these infections. A cow may be dangerous even though not found to be not infected, as the germs are passed out with the excreta before any clinical evidence of tuberculosis is present, and owing to the position of the udder it is almost impossible to keep them out of the pail as they fall in with the tiny particles of manure that are on the cow's body and that silt down in the form of dust. Apart from the recognized disease producing bacteria, it is known that large numbers of ordinarily harmless ones in milk may cause a serious and frequently fatal diarrhea in children during the summer months.

Points Charged Against Pasteurization.

Some of the arguments put forward against pasteurization are: That the cream is reduced; that the milk is rendered indigestible; that the milk will not sour, thus doing away with nature's danger signal, and that the vitamines are destroyed. The last is the only argument that now carries any weight. The cream is not reduced in quantity, but by beating the fat globules are broken up smaller and do not rise to the top so easily, thus causing the cream line to appear less. As a matter of fact at 142 degs. F., there is very little reduction even in the appearance. With proper pasteurization the chemical and physical constitution of the milk is not appreciably changed, at least not to an extent that renders it less valuable as a food. The lactic acid bacteria that cause souring in milk are not all destroyed by the heating, and consequently properly pasteurized milk can be soured for cooking purposes during its age and condition. Recent work on vitamines shows that the anti-rachitic and anti-neuritic factors are not removed by pasteurization, but that the anti-scorbutic vitamine probably is. It should be replaced by giving daily a teaspoonful of orange juice diluted with water and sweetened.

"Safety First" Good Practice.

Until methods of milk production are much more perfect than they are at present the only way of maintaining a safe milk supply would appear to be by pasteurization, in which the rapid cooling and keeping cool is quite as much attention as the maintenance of the correct temperature for the proper length of time.—Ronald Gwatkin, D.V.Sc., Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph.

The most profitable use is made of beet tops when they are siloed and fed with alfalfa hay or other forages and possibly supplemented with grain or concentrate feeds.

The chief value of cowpea hay lies in its high percentage of digestible protein. This has been verified by numerous feeding tests.

When Peter Scored.

A picturesque personality in the Ontario Legislature is "the little Welshman"—R. Reece Hall, Liberal member for Parry Sound, who has in his make-up some share of the same dynamic forces which have made David Lloyd George the outstanding figure of the twentieth century in the world of politics.

Mr. Hall, a Quaker by religious persuasion, proclaims himself as the apostle of the northland. He told the House quite candidly, in his first session, that he didn't propose to apologize for taking up its time in voicing the achievements and the needs of his district, and he never has. If the Legislature had a Hansard, the records would probably reveal that the name of Parry Sound was uttered oftener, in debate, than that of any other municipality in the province.

It is seldom, indeed, that Mr. Hall can be floored, when singing the praises of the town which he has adopted as his home, and of which he has served several terms as mayor. But once, at least he was left speechless. In the corridors one afternoon he was holding forth on his favorite topic to a group of listeners when Peter Heenan, Labor member for Kenora, took a hand in the conversation.

"Ah, yes," said Peter. "I remember that town of yours, Mr. Hall. Now, you know, I come from Kenora, and I was in the northland two years ago, I was on my way to Toronto, when the train was suddenly snowed up. I looked out the window and saw a little tank engine ahead. Says I to the conductor, "What place is that?' 'Oh, that's Parry Sound,' says he to me. 'Oh,' says I to myself, 'then 'tis just a step or two farther to Toronto.' So, out I climbed from the train, and walked the rest of the way."

To this day, Mr. Hall regards the honorable member for Kenora with a wary eye.

The Epinornis.

The epinornis, a gigantic extinct feathered monster which formerly inhabited Madagascar, laid an egg as big as a small beer barrel, its contents being equal to those of about 300 hen's eggs.

FOUND BURIED RICHES

CANADIAN SOUGHT FOR GOLD IN THE SOUTH SEAS.

Ottawa Mariner Discovered Cocos Island But Died in the Moment of Triumph—Untold Spanish Loot Hidden in Caves Has Never Since Been Found by Searchers.

Here is the story of a buried treasure that really was discovered. And, to add interest, the treasure-map was in the hands of a man from Newfoundland, while the organizer of the expedition was a Canadian. True, it was many years ago—in 1841 or 1842 to be exact—that a ship sailed out of Halifax, bound for Panama, carrying as passengers, Thomas Keating, the Newfoundlander, and Captain Bogue, a mariner of Ottawa.

It is necessary to explain how Keating held the buried treasure-map. Six years before he and his fishermen companions rescued three seamen from a wreck on the Newfoundland coast. According to the story, one of these sailors, named William Thompson, taking a fancy to his rescuer, lived in Keating's house, and confessed to piracy.

It seems that in 1820 Thompson was mate of an English brig, the Mary Dear, commanded by Captain Morgan, that was lying in the port of Callao. At that time the adjacent city of Lima was the last foothold of Spain's power in South America, and even then they were threatened by an advancing republican army. Spanish fears ran amuck. The city was rich in treasure, and if captured sacking was expected.

So all the gold and silver in the government treasury—a vast hoard—the money in the banks, the gold and bejewelled ornaments belonging to the churches, all the private wealth of Peru's viceroy and other wealthy residents was gathered together under government supervision. Perhaps 150 million dollars' worth was put under the seal of Spain.

When the custodians of this immense treasure saw the British flag flying from the Mary Dear they decided that an English ship was safer for the wealth than any land fortress. So the variegated collection being shipped aboard the brig, the master was instructed to put to sea until it was safe to return. A dozen or so young and beautiful Spanish women sought refuge in the ship's care, for a few days, as they believed.

But an unexpected storm drove them far to the north, almost wrecking the brig, and forced the captain to bury the treasure on an uninhabited island. However, he carefully marked the exact spot on a map. The original map of Cocos Island!

But the stupidity of Thompson and a part of the crew flared up. They mutinied, murdered the captain, and the map fell into the clutch of the mate.

Then, hoisting the black flag, the mutineers prepared to sweep the seas captained by Thompson. Incidentally, it is said, Thompson's conscience is obscure, the unfortunate women were put ashore on Cocos, where their subsequent fate cannot be described. Eventually they all disappeared. Some of the more loyal mutinous, who refused to join their companions, were slaughtered on the beach.

But Thompson was too cunning to tell these details to his new friend in Newfoundland. He merely told of his daring life under the Jolly Roger; how he and Benito Bonilla, the last pirate-king of the Pacific, buried accidental cheese-bonde of loot on Cocos Island. Keating's mind thrilled with these stories.

A year or so later the slayer of Captain Morgan felt an itch to regain the board. He met a sea-captain named Bogue or Boig who, becoming interested, travelled back to Newfoundland, heard the story from Thompson's lips, saw the map and was convinced of the treasure's existence. Accordingly he booked passage for three on an English ship, the Edgecombe, out of Halifax, agreeing with the owners that she should carry back any "find."

But Providence—some call it fate—had brought the ex-pirate up short. No feasting on ill-gotten loot for him. For two weeks before, Captain Bogue's return to Newfoundland, the late ravager of the seas had died of pneumonia.

When dying he gave verbal instructions—which Keating wrote down—and placed the map in the fisherman's hands.

However, Captain Bogue and Keating determined to venture alone. After unloading the ship's cargo at Panama, they sailed west, soon sighting the wooded heights and blue bays of the expected island. It was like a tropical jewel set in an azure sea.

The first day the two adventurers went ashore in the long-boat. Not trusting the English crew—rough water-front characters of that day—they struck inland and, following Thompson's directions, by remarkable fortune found and effected an entrance into the treasure-cave.

The emotions of the finders can hardly be related, though some years later Keating wrote to a Montreal merchant who was thinking of fitting out another expedition:". . . Strewn on the floor were many chests . . . their lids were held by cleats bound in position by iron. . . . We broke open a chest and it was filled with coins, some silver, some gold. In the chest we opened were also two bags of ship's canvas, tied with grass cords. These fell apart as we lifted them, and out dropped a sparkling mass of jewels, diamonds, rubies, pearls, and stones I do not know the names of, set in rings, bracelets, necklaces—even in combs for the hair and girdles for the waist." Gold and beautifully carved crucifixes, chalices, candelabra, he said, lay on the floor. "There were two statutes, one of the Madonna and one of the

A Bit of Philosophy.

A famous hotel man, who is also a philosopher, once made a remark that would apply to almost any business.

"The greatest mistake," he declared, "that is commonly made by employees and managers is to exert themselves more for the comfort of an old-time customer than for a new one. According to all the rules of hospitality and logic, the person who should receive the most effort for his entertainment within one's door is the newcomer," he continued, according to Nation's Business. "In your own home you would not think of making a great fuss over a man who had been entertained there before, and more or less ignore another fellow who is receiving your hospitality for the first time. Yet in a hotel dining room the head waiter is most careful to seat the man whom he has seen there before, and in most stores the clerks make more fuss over an old customer than one who is giving the store a first trial."

A Starting Scheme.

T. Kennard Thomson, formerly of Toronto, has ideas that would make New York look more different still from anything else that ever happened or was conceived by the mind of man. He is a civil engineer, too, and may get his ideas across.

Building a block long, twenty or thirty stories high, housing a thousand families each, with a sub-mayor in charge of each community, and great moving, platforms like human belt conveyors taking the place of subways and trolley systems, are some of the things he visualises for New York.

More immediately practical is his project of adding two and a half square miles to Manhattan Island, using a sea wall from the Battery to the Narrows and then filling in. Perhaps he got this idea from Toronto's harbor board. Mr. Thomson was educated at the University of Toronto and was graduated at the head of his class in civil engineering in 1892, afterwards marrying Miss Mary Julia Harvey of Toronto.

MRS. BUDGE SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

River Desert, Que.—"I used to have a severe pain in my side. I would be unable to walk fast and could not stand for any length of time to do my ironing or washing, but I would have to lie down to get relief from the pain. I had this for about two years, then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had had good results. I certainly got good results from it, too, as the last time I had a sore side was last fall and I have not had it since. I am also glad of having good nursing for my baby, and think it is your medicine that helped me in this way."—Mrs. L. V. BUDGE, River Desert, Quebec.

If you are suffering from the torture of a displacement, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness, or a pain in the side, you should lose no time in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write for it to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario. This book contains valuable information that every woman should know.

Insulting Invitation.

An invitation to dinner, among the middle of upper classes of Japan frequently commences as follows: "I beg pardon for thus insulting you in bringing your company at my house to dinner. The house is small and very dirty. Our habits are rude, and you may not get anything fit to eat; and if you find that you will condescend to be present with us at six o'clock." Upon arriving at the house you find it sportively decorated, lastly in arrangements, and the host and hostess affable indeed. The bill of fare consists of ten or fifteen courses, the best of the season can afford. At the supplantation of the host is the method adopted to pay you honor.

The Bowie Knife.

Some authorities say that the bowie knife was invented by Col. James Bowie, who was born in 1790, and was killed in the Alamo with Col. Travis and David Crockett in 1836 during the Texan revolution against Mexico. Col. Bowie was a great fighter and one of the most deadly duelists in the southern states. On the Potomac river is the grave of a man who was killed by Bowie in a duel in the last decade of the 18th century. Other authorities say that Col. Bowie had nothing to do with the invention of the bowie knife. They claim it was invented by a man named R. P. Bowie, about whom very little is known.

Our Day.

The division of the day into hours is of such antiquity that its origin is uncertain, although it is said to be such as far as the third century B.C. the custom prevailed of dividing day and night each into twelve hours, a custom adopted by the Jews and Greeks. The twelve-hour division probably was connected in some way with the ancient duodecimal system of numbering.

Jenner Centenary.

Edward Jenner died January 26, 1823. Few scientists have been more liberally rewarded by Government than Jenner, who received in two votes a total of £30,000, to escape aim for time and less lost in his fight with smallpox. In his private practice at Berkeley, Jenner used to ride out on horseback to his patients' houses in a fine coat and wearing silver spurs.

FROM HARD TIMES TO CANADA

Canadian Pacific liner "Metagama."

Do the pipers lament? Migrants aboard the tender of the

WHEN the Canadian Pacific steamships "Marloch" and "Metagama" last docked at St. John, Canada gained to the extent of over six hundred able-bodied and industrious farmers, farm workers and women from the Hebrides. Forced by the loss of their fishing trade through the war and German competition, and by general hard times to leave their thatched homes, these people have come to a land of promise and have been welcomed as the most valuable immigrants in years. Under the leadership of Rev. Alexander J. Gillies and Rev. John MacMillan, they have gone to the Red Deer district of Alberta and to Canada has between 8,000 and 9,000 buffalo to-day.

The Wainwright preserve has just about reached the limit of its capacity. That is one reason for thinning out the herd this winter. Another reason is that the bulls have become too numerous, and fights, many of them fatal, frequently occur.

some to engage in fishing, which brought but small money, and others in the merchant marine. In the fall those who were near returned home, harvested the small crop and thatched their houses. But there was not work for all. It was of no use to fish when there was no market and one man could do the work of the farm which produced but little. The wolf was at every door, almost, and the emigration officer received more applications for information and later assistance than he could comfortably handle.

These people having arrived and received welcome have already buckled down to work. Their losses at home have contributed to Canada's gain. One party have gone to Red Deer where they will build their own church and school, and in addition to English they will retain their own native Gaelic tongue. The remainder of the immigrants have been split up as hired men in various parts of Ontario. Over four hundred were passengers on the "Marloch," the rest on the "Metagama."

TOO MANY BUFFALO.

Efforts to Increase Herds Have Proved Successful.

The buffalo is coming back, says the Toronto correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. So successful has been the effort of the Canadian Government to preserve it from extinction that it has been necessary to plan for some day to shoot a mammoth buffalo "kill." A thousand animals will be slaughtered. It is forty years since anything like that number of buffalo have been killed in a year.

Many men still living remember when the buffalo roamed the North American continent litorally in millions. When they stampeded the earth shook and the roar struck terror into the heart of any living creature that happened to be in the line of advance. Estimates say that once there were between twenty and forty millions in existence. But the buffalo, though formidable, was an easy prey for the hunter. His size and his gregarious instincts made him a shining target for slaughter in the mass. But the time the Canadian Pacific Railway invaded the west only big piles of bleached bones remained to attest the slaughter. But these bones gave the infant railway its first freight. A huge tonnage was carried east to Montreal for use in a sugar refinery.

The extinction was almost complete, but not quite. Lord Strathcona gathered together a few animals for his Manitoba estate. A small herd survived in the far north Peace River country. But these alone remained, except a few animals privately owned in the United States.

Twenty-five years ago the Canadian Government bought Lord Strathcona's herd and took it to the national park at Banff. For years it was regarded only as a sort of curiosity. Then it dawned on the authorities that their little herd had potentialities. A game preserve for the Northwest was decided upon. Accordingly, 162 square miles of sandy, rolling prairie, dotted with clumps of poplar and little lakes, and unsuitable for agriculture, was set aside and girt with a woven wire fence ten feet high. Into this enclosure were turned antelope, moose, elk, deer, and with them some 709 buffalo. The buffalo consisted of the small herd from Banff and of those bought from Michael Pablo, a Montana rancher. Turned loose under the best natural conditions in this park situated at Wainwright, Alta., about 100 miles due east of Edmonton, the buffalo thrived from the start. Last spring the caretakers counted 6,146 animals, and though the 1922 calf crop has not be counted, it is estimated that there will be an addition of from 1,500 to 2,000 healthy little humpbacked calves following their fierce, shaggy mothers.

Besides the herd at Wainwright, we also have 300 herd at Elk Island Park, Alta., twelve herd at Banff, and a few buffalo in the zoos at London, Ont., Vancouver, Toronto, and at a few other points, to say nothing of the wild herd at Peace River, which, roaming over a vast area of prairie and bush, makes computation of its numbers hopeless. The Mounted Police at Fort Smith estimate the Peace River herd at anywhere from 600 to 2,000 head. So it is possible that Canada has between 8,000 and 9,000 buffalo to-day.

THAT WOOD PILE

There ain't no poor in Napanee,
Hard times have changed to good,
The ones that lacked a little
Wealth
Have died for want of wood.

Let's sell them wood, and "do" them good,
Said a few men of renown;
For we can palm off anything
To the simple folks round town.

We find it cheaper yet to burn
Our carpets and our chairs
It finds a job for some poor soul,
And our fuel is less than their's.

So Councilmen of Napanee.
If your reasonings tone too good,
Just get your heads together
Then we'll have lots of "wood."

DEAR PEOPLE:—

How's your winter's coal hanging out? Ours is out altogether, but we are not buying much of this charity wood. Oh, no, we have faith, and hope yet to be spared enough sense to know a good thing when we see it. We try to buy economically, and at the same time do the fair thing.

Our Saviour said, "Go Feed the Flocks," so you'll pardon us for referring to the word (feed); feed it means (not fleece). Now people don't be offended at our little chat; we want to keep you from geting the (blues), and remember one thing, "don't get your feet wet." We are still here and doing fine. If we can't keep your house warm we can at least make your feet feel happy. So when you're down town drop in and get warm by our (Hot Air System).

Some motorists have an annoying habit of trying conclusions with the silent policeman on the corner of Dundas and West streets, and when they come off victors and lay the policeman low, they have not enough common decency to stop and pick it up and replace it. Some evening a real policeman will catch one of them and an appearance in police court will result.

The Schooner William Jamieson Founders Near Amherst Island.

The schooner William Jamieson sank in the north channel between Bath and the head of Amherst Island, about three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The crew reached Amherst Island safely in their motor yawl boat which is propelled by gasoline. The schooner left Oswego on Monday afternoon loaded with 264 tons of anthracite for Ryan & Hart, Picton. The vessel was leaking some as is generally expected with the first load of the season, but was making very good headway, although the weather was heavy. Tuesday about noon, out in the lake, off Indian Point, she was struck with a heavy squall which wrecked the sails and brought down part of the rigging and left the vessel at the mercy of the wind and waves. The crew stuck to the ship and got her through the gap and tried to reach here or Amherst Island, but were obliged to abandon her and she sank at three o'clock in about fifty feet of water half-a mile from the head of Amherst Island, and four miles from Bath. The crew remained on Amherst Island over night as the sea was too heavy for a small boat to cross the gap. They went to Picton Wednesday morning in the ship's gasoline yawl. The Jamieson was formerly owned by Capt. McCullough.

DEATHS

Blanchard—At Kingston, on Wednesday, May 16th, 1923, John B. Blanchard, in his 87th year.

VanDusen—At Toronto, on Wednesday, May 16th, 1923, Franklin Wellington VanDusen, in his 61st year.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. E. J. Williams, who departed this life on May 31st, 1922.

She has never quite left us, our darling who passed
Through the shadows of death to the sunlight above;
A thousand sweet memories are holding her fast
To the place which she blessed with her presence and love.

The work which she left and the books which she read,
Speak mutely, though still with an eloquence rare;
And the songs that she sung, and dear words that she said,
Yet linger and sigh on the desolate air. 25-a-p
